WEATHER KEY POINTS

03/25/22 - 03/31/22

Friday - Thursday

- Very warm temperatures will persist statewide through Sunday, with daytime high temperatures well into the 80s across many inland lower elevations, while the southeast deserts warm into the 90s
 - These temperatures will remain near or above record territory for late March, with some heat impacts likely during the day. Nighttime temperatures will continue to be cool, reducing the risk for more significant heat impacts
- An approaching storm system appears increasingly likely to bring more widespread rain and mountain snow as well as cooler temperatures later Sunday through Tuesday
 - Some precipitation will arrive across the Sacramento Valley and foothills, but most of the widespread precipitation will be across central and southern California Monday and Tuesday
 - Rainfall for the Bay Area and Central Valley down to southern California looks to generally be around one half inch to an inch total, with brief, nuisance flooding possible if a heavier shower and thunderstorm develops, which would most likely be during Monday late morning through afternoon period from the Central Coast south
 - Total rainfall up to 2 inches will be possible for the foothills of southern California, where the heaviest precipitation is expected from this weather system
 - Snow is expected to remain above 6500 feet, but may drop down to 5800 ft on Monday or even lower in heavier showers
 - The northern coast of California, and inland northern California - Siskiyou, Trinity, Shasta, Modoc and Lassen counties - will likely remaining mostly if not entirely dry
- Warmer and drier conditions return by mid-week and persist through the end of next week
